- One of the shooting stars among cooking influencers
- Cooking the fun way

Truly delicious

The recipes of Noah Bachofen are a delight for kitchen rookies and ambitious amateur cooks alike. The roughly 50 recipes feature numerous professional tips but are easy to prepare even without substantial experience and specialized utensils.

The book presents all the things Noah loves to eat at home: an entire buttered cauliflower, eggplant schnitzel and Ziger cheese dumplings with onion sauce, or San Sebastian cheesecake, the simplest cake in the world. But he also shares recipes for basics such as a hearty vegetable stock or various types of mayonnaise (for example with basil or nut butter). Besides all the recipes, the book tells many a humorous story from Noah's home region, canton Glarus.

Noah Bachofen's goal is to get the seemingly simple things right. And thus we follow Noah to his training workshop in Elm where he shows us how to prepare the perfect rösti. Noah cooks with joy, imagination, and a sense of humour.

Noah Bachofen: was sous-chef at the vegetarian 2-star restaurant »Magdalena« in Rickenbach SZ. Today, he shares his stories and cooking videos on various media and social media channels and has his own TV show (»Hype Kitchen«) on Sat.1.

- 50 desserts de luxe from the »Pastry Chef of the Year 2020«
- Sweetening without refined sugar
- Recipes, product details, and reports

Preparing desserts like a top-notch pastry chef: Kay Baumgardt uncovers the secret recipes of 50 masterpieces. They can be prepared in a regular kitchen with no need for complicated machines or technology. Desserts unplugged. The renowned pastry chef explains how he uses his favourite ingredients, be it strawberries or chocolate, buckwheat or stalk celery, to devise unique creations. These include classics such as cheesecake but also surprising novelties like bacon ice cream with chocolate crumble and field salad cream. Herb oils also play an important role: Baumgardt loves the complexity achieved with the help of bitter and floral aromas. That is why he dedicates a separate chapter to this topic, just as he does to the topics of fermentation and natural methods of sweetening. This book will turn you into a true dessert expert.

Kay Baumgardt: GaultMillau »Pastry Chef of the Year 2020«, pastry chef for the restaurant Incantare, awarded with two Michelin stars, at the »Gasthaus zur Fernsicht« in Heiden where he combines traditional craftsmanship with innovative techniques.

- A gourmet trip to the world's fire kitchens
- A unique experience, from preparation to consumption
- Dishes for all types of diet, preparation method and food product

A culinary bonfire that brings people together!

Fire cooking is a feast for all the senses. From their various trips to fire kitchens all over the world, Monika Di Muro and Chris Bay brought back traditional and modern techniques, surprising and often unusual dishes that need few utensils and can be prepared on the open fire with easily available ingredients. The incomparable experience of cooking with fire transforms even preparatory steps into an extraordinary event. The recipes are geared to all types of diets, seasons, and weather conditions, are diverse and balanced at the same time, and even delicious desserts and rarities find their way to the hearth.

The theoretical part takes a detailed look at the fire cooking craft and its related sensual experiences. The over 80 dishes of the recipe chapter are prepared in seven different places of power. Some are vegan or vegetarian, others contain meat or fish, they inspire starters, main courses, and desserts and carry melodious names such as glow sausage, fire bread salad, paper fish, or egg carpet.

Monika Di Muro and Chris Bay: Fire cooking pros with their own mobile fire kitchen. Co-owners of the catering company Chillfood, specializing in fire cooking events and workshops in Switzerland and abroad.

- Archaic techniques with new culinary dimension
- Cooking techniques, fire types, recipes
- Fire cooking as the ultimate experience with friends

Fire cooking is different from and more than just barbecue. It is an ancient technique with a new culinary dimension. Uncomplicated and unexpectedly simple. With new types of flavours, interesting roasting aromas, subtle smoke savours – a holistic orgy for the palate and the senses. This book provides easy and clear explanations on the basics of fire cooking, demonstrating different methods, materials, and techniques. All of which are geared towards one goal: to offer traditional and rich culinary variety based on ancient recipes and new ideas. Such as toasted bread with rosemary ash, Catalan fire onions with spicy romesco sauce, trout from the hot stone or archaic coal meat, liquid camembert in a wooden box, and, to round it off, blueberry crumble or upside down Linzer cake.

Blazing passion. Preparing a fire-cooked meal is a feast each and every time

Smoke-roasting, hang-roasting, or pan-baking: this book unveils the secrets of fire cooking. It is all about the fun of preparing delicious food on an open fire, using simple tools and ingredients as well as all our senses. The book is not about simple and plain barbecues, but presents extraordinary ways of preparing meat, vegetarian and vegan dishes, and about how to enjoy these in the unique atmosphere that only an open fire can create. The authors describe easy to cook recipes and inspire even experienced gourmets to approach cooking from a different angle, to open their senses to a new type of culinary delight. The book shows the crafts and techniques of fire cooking with no need for any special equipment. Cooking under the open sky as a culinary adventure: every dish is different, and every dish is the best.

Monika Di Muro and Chris Bay: Fire cooking pros with their own mobile fire kitchen. Co-owners of the catering company Chillfood including a catering service and fire cooking school, they also orchestrate fire cooking events in Switzerland and abroad.

»Moreover, it is a craft that goes beyond the well-known barbecue and should be learnt and understood from scratch. Therefore, we describe the different techniques and somewhat extravagant dishes in the recipe chapter in a way that they can be prepared even with little experience and using simple tools. Whoever wants to dig deeper will find lots of valuable information about fire cooking.« Chris Bay, Monika Di Muro

- The first book on vegetarian cuisine in Switzerland with recipes from all corners of Switzerland – famous classics and new discoveries
- 150 recipes of the vegetarian Swiss cuisine, gently adapted to the spirit of our time
- Background texts on the various dishes and Switzerland's vegetarian tradition

Just like any other region with a strong agricultural character, Switzerland has a rich tradition of vegetarian meals. For many centuries people cooked whatever could be harvested in gardens, fields, and forests, complemented by cheese, milk, butter, and cream in abundance. This resulted in innumerable variations of classics such as rösti, fondue, Alp macaroons and capuns, souffles, gratins, and wähe pies, plus sweet delights such as rüebli cake, merängge, Spanish bread, torta di pane, toétché, and cuchaule. Carlo Bernasconi explored old cookbooks, archives, and rural cooking traditions, thereby discovering a treasure chest of recipes that he brought up to date ever so gently. 150 recipes, sorted by regions and accompanied by informative texts on the origins of the dishes and the vegetarian traditions of Switzerland.

Carlo Bernasconi: For many years stock exchange correspondent in Switzerland and editor-in-chief of »Schweizer Buchhandel«, author of various cookbooks (»La cucina verde« and others), manager of a Zurich restaurant for vegetarian Italian cuisine. Passed away in October 2016.

- From cakes and tarts to wafers, cookies, breads, crepes, and quiches
- 70 delicious, gluten free recipes
- The first baking book based exclusively on buckwheat recipes

Buckwheat is not a crop but belongs to the family of knotweeds. One hundred years ago it ranked among the most important food items in many regions of Europe. Due to our altered, more conscious approach to healthy alimentation it currently experiences a genuine renaissance. Buckwheat is gluten free and helps stabilizing the equilibrium of acids and bases, moreover it has a positive impact on the glycemic index and produces balancing effects with high blood pressure, diabetes and obesity. Subtle and nutty, it bestows upon pastries a unique and unmistakable flavour. This is the first cookbook on the subject written in German, presenting plenty of recipes based exclusively on buckwheat. As buckwheat requires an entirely different method of preparation, the author has rethought each recipe from scratch.

Modesta Bersin: Has worked as nutritional and diet consultant for 25 years. Training in prevention and naturopathy. For many years she has been dedicated to growing and using silver buckwheat, and eventually also started to develop recipes. She delivers courses and lectures on the topics of nutrition and health enhancement.

- 130 easy to prepare and often tried wild plant recipes
- 60 plant portraits with detailed photos and texts for easy identification
- Breathtaking photos of all recipes

Meret Bissegger's passion for all types of edible wild plants was unleashed on an alp in Ticino. After more than 30 years of regaling the customers at her restaurant with gourmet wild plant dishes and holding courses on how to collect and cook wild plants, she now presents her first book on the subject. It describes and displays images of more than 60 plants. Moreover it lists locations, characteristic features, confusion risks, and tells us how to correctly pick and use wild plants in the kitchen. The result is a reference and cookbook with more than 120 recipes easy to prepare at home: dips for apéritif, starters, salads, soups, risotti, pasta, oven dishes, delicious side dishes and wonderful desserts. The plants portrayed are botanically sorted and both their Latin and German names are listed. Examples of the most important plant families are presented in additional chapters. Hans-Peter Siffert amazingly captures each dish, his photos reveal the true beauty of these »weeds«. The book is complemented by photos of the Ticino landscape and of Meret's cooking courses.

- 150 brilliantly simple vegetable recipes for the cold season
- Ancient and modern knowledge on indigenous vegetable types
- Valuable information on the sustainability of organic produce

Long awaited by many an enthusiastic cook: the latest book by Meret Bissegger. The bestselling author presents a wide variety of vegetables for the cold season.

The book familiarises us with more than 40 indigenous autumn and winter vegetables, including some ancient and less known types (Slow Food). Each of the richly illustrated vegetable portraits is complemented by tips and kitchen tricks for easy and tasty preparation, as well as particularly well matching combinations of spices, herbs, and other ingredients. More than 150 simple recipes, both raw and cooked, prove how rich and wonderful dishes of the cold season can be. Her chapters on cultivation and harvesting allow an insight into the life of small businesses but also large scale producers and wholesalers of the organic farming trade. The vast amount of first-hand information highlights ecological and economical interrelations, at the same time this allows for a more conscious approach to seasonal produce and motivates us to aim for fairer and better consumer habits.

Hans-Peter Siffert has captured most of the recipes, the diversity of vegetables, and the world of first-class organic vegetable producers in delightful photographs.

- 163 vegetable recipes and valuable information on sustainability and organically produced food
- Vegetable portraits as well as tips for preparation, storage, and cooking
- The latest book by the best-selling author of »My Wild Plant Cuisine«

Best-selling author Meret Bissegger presents more than 50 spring and summer vegetables and offers tips on preparation and storage. 163 mostly vegetarian, often vegan recipes serve as inspiration for beginners and experienced cooks alike. Starting with the earliest Southern spring messengers such as fava beans or field mustard, moving on to the domestic May turnip all the way to summer classics such as aubergines and tomatoes or less well-known vegetable types like friar's beard, okra, or papacelle. Aromatic herbs, crisp salads, edible blossoms, and wild plants complement several basic recipes. Her reports on cultivation, harvesting, and processing of vegetables offer insights into the world of organic farming in Switzerland and Italy. Essays on environmental and economic topics provide useful suggestions on the appropriate handling of our precious food. Once again, Hans-Peter Siffert has done a fantastic job capturing various types of vegetables and the world of producers in beautiful images.

- The cookbook for people with irritable bowel syndrome
- Scientifically tested diet plan
- 170 recipes for light and easy to digest everyday dishes

Many people suffer from belly aches, exhalation, diarrhoea, or constipation. A couple of years back a scientifically tested nutrition therapy for irritable bowel syndrome was introduced, the so-called FODMAP concept. FODMAP is an acronym for »fermentable oligo-, di-, and monosaccharides and polyols«, all of which should be avoided by individuals suffering from irritable bowel syndrome. The book offers simple and easy to understand explanations on the causes of the condition along with suggestions how to alleviate it. In over 160 recipes it shows options for a delicious and balanced diet despite the dietary restrictions: be it simple breakfast ideas, snacks for the road, uncomplicated everyday dishes, sophisticated meals, or heavenly desserts. Complete with hands-on practical tips and weekly menu suggestions, this book is an indispensable guide for everyone affected by irritable bowel syndrome, and a useful reference for nutrition experts.

- By the renowned 3-star cook
- Volume 4 of the successful heart book series

Andreas Caminada's underwater world!

In his latest book, Andreas Caminada focuses on fresh fish from streams, lakes, rivers, and oceans. The star chef went well beyond the borders of his homeland to look for the best fish, clams, and shellfish in order to give a comprehensive overview of fish cuisine. He created new recipes while enhancing some classical dishes, which lends a unique dynamic to this book.

Next to carefully portrayed dishes, from bouillabaisse to marinated trout, Caminada also explains the most relevant basic recipes, such as fish stock or beurre blanc. He takes the reader on a richly illustrated journey all the way from the Graubünden mountains to the Adriatic and the North Sea, the final destinations of the waters coming from some of Graubünden's mountain springs.

Andreas Caminada: runs his own restaurant and hotel at Chateau Schauenstein in Fürstenu, Domleschg. He has been awarded three Michelin stars and 19 points by GaultMillau. In 2018 he opened the Casa Caminada. At his IGNIV restaurants in Bad Ragaz, St Moritz, Zurich, and Bangkok he combines fine dining with an innovative sharing concept.

- Andreas Caminada's homage to his homeland. Traditional recipes from Graubünden next to brand new, modern creations
- High quality design, sumptuous illustrations

The first cookbook by the famous star chef Andreas Caminada is a culinary love declaration to his native Graubünden and a bow to simple cooking. »In my book readers will find sensual and easy to understand recipes, but they will also get an impression of the region's cultural richness, its geographical diversity, its exceptional products, and the people who stand behind all this«, says the chef of Chateau Schauenstein. Apart from traditional dishes such as capuns, maluns, or pizokel, Caminada presents modern, nature-oriented dishes that reflect the seasons as well as the place his heart is rooted in. The protagonists of his creations are poultry from the Val Lumnezia, saffron from Fläsch, melons from Pratval, or mountain potatoes from the Albula Valley.

Andreas Caminada: Runs the restaurant »Chateau Schauenstein« in Fürstenau, Domleschg (Graubünden) – awarded with three Michelin stars and 19 points by GaultMillau – as well as the »Casa Caminada«. - The second book by the brilliant star chef from Graubünden
- Self-confident cooking that makes use of all the 5 basic tastes
- Astounding pictures of food, products, and people

What does a star chef think while preparing his dishes? How does he use different flavours in order to render his creations both light and refined? In his new cookbook, Andreas Caminada explains why acid is so important to him, what the word »umami« means, where his obsession with bitter taste comes from, what significance sweets have in his cuisine, and why salt is by far the most essential ingredient. About 50 recipes, from pickled trout with beetroot and smoky vinaigrette all the way to yeast cake with vanilla ice cream, invite us to cook and think. Because Caminada's message is twofold: once you understand how harmony within a dish comes about, you can easily develop a number of variations to a given recipe. Photographer Gaudenz Danuser from Graubünden renders astonishing portraits of both food creations and extraordinary people – people who receive special food deliveries from Andreas Caminada.

Andreas Caminada: Runs the restaurant »Chateau Schauenstein« in Fürstenau, Domleschg (Graubünden) – awarded with three Michelin stars and 19 points by GaultMillau – as well as the »Casa Caminada«. - The third book by the renowned 3-star chef
- Vegetarian creations you can try at home, by Andreas Caminada
- Vegetable and spice combinations as well as preservation techniques

The garden surrounding Chateau Schauenstein is an intrinsic part of Andreas Caminada's culinary universe. Applying the principles of sustainable permaculture, it supplies the star chef with vegetables, fruits, and herbs. The garden inspires him to create the most astonishing dishes from seemingly bland ingredients. In this book, the garden signifies healthy soil, ancient crops, and the art of preservation. Caminada's recipes prove that vegetarian cuisine is full of surprises if you devote sufficient attention to the produce and know which ingredients will most favourably accentuate their special character. A slightly sour counterpart will turn the earthy sweetish beetroot into a superstar, while kohlrabi harmonizes best with saffron. Sophisticated dishes do by no means require meat. Vegetables and mushrooms can create utmost complex aromas as well, especially when paired with smoke. The recipes, though wonderfully refined, are easy to put into practice even for amateur cooks.

- Inspired by Italian cuisine

Cook with emotion, choose the best ingredients, take your time, and enjoy the process!

Carlo Cao cooked his first meal at the age of 12 – and found his source of happiness: »Cooking is my life!«. Today he is a vegan chef who puts his heart and passion into his culinary art. Inspired by Italian traditions, Carlo Cao developed a savoury plant-based cuisine rich in delightful flavours.

In this book he presents his favourite recipes that he brought to perfection over the years, some simple, others more complex. Among others we find compositions such as a grapefruit salad with hazelnut balsamic dressing, a lentil walnut bolognese with rosemary béchamel, and millet pancakes with herbs and peas. Or a fantastic lemon cake with poppy.

This vegan cookbook offers a variety of recipes for pan, pot, deep fryer, and oven, numerous creations for breakfast, brunch, salad, or dessert buffets. Plant-based creations drawing from abundant and rich ingredients.

Carlo Cao: is a chef and food blogger who grew up in the Swiss Alps near the Italian border. On his vegan cuisine Instagram channel he has around 200,000 enthusiastic followers.

- Kids are cooking healthy and climate-friendly
- By one of Germany's leading nutrition experts
- Food that is both healthy and fun

Children cook for the climate!

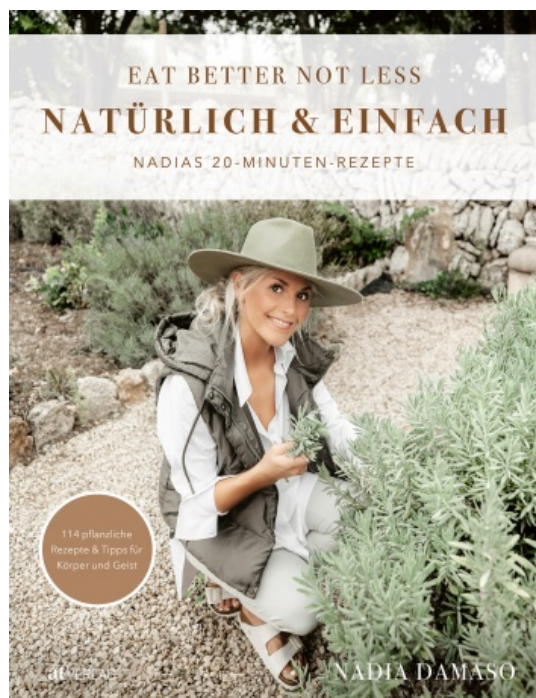

Today's children are the consumers and decision-makers of tomorrow. It is essential to empower them to take a self-determined and responsible approach to food as early as possible. A sustainable diet helps to protect the planet as well as our own health.

People often think that sustainable food is only for »health nuts«. This cookbook proves the opposite: it inspires with delicious recipes and child-friendly facts it shows that sustainable nutrition is colourful and fun. Children can cook the recipes on their own or with a little help from their parents. The ingredients are healthy, sustainable and appeal to children's tastes.

Lia Carlucci: is a university-educated nutrition scientist and an entrepreneur. As a founder and managing director, she has many years of experience in setting up companies in the food and nutrition sector. She co-founded »Nutrition Hub«, Germany's largest network for nutrition experts, and »Vitamin C«, a community for pioneers of sustainable nutrition. Lia regularly appears in the media as an expert, particularly on the topics of children's nutrition and sustainability.

Charoline Bauer: holds a degree in literature and works as a freelance author as well as an editor for familie.de. She is a ghostwriter and author of numerous books, including the nutrition guide »Vegan zur Höchstleistung« and the children's book »Die kleine Löwenspinne«.

- Healthy and beneficial for humans and the environment

The wealth of simplicity

For his latest cookbook, Claudio Del Principe draws from the riches of »Cucina Povera« and proclaims it the cooking culture of the future: simple, tasty, and environmentally sustainable. It is based on low-cost, seasonal, regional, and readily available ingredients: vegetables, crops, legumes, some garlic, olive oil, and even stale bread can be used to prepare a heart-warming feast.

»Cucina Povera« qualifies as Italy's »modest cuisine« and comprises regional dishes based on rural tradition. Simple combinations, easy preparation, and focus on the essentials are key to this extraordinary experience in taste. Ingredients are not over-processed, modestly seasoned, and easy to digest.

In his recipes Claudio Del Principe not only preserves old traditions, but expertly transforms classical recipes into modern variations, thereby reigniting our passion for the deliciously simple.

Claudio Del Principe: is a writer, storyteller, and successful author of ten books to date, winning numerous awards. - Slow Food all'italiana - Bringing back diligence and attention to detail to cooking
- Cooking diary including over 200 recipes

This book is for those of us who are fed up with fashionable appetizers and who are suspicious of the fast cuisine movement that pretends time saving is the biggest benefit of cooking. It is a passionate commitment to slowness, diligence, and care. Time as vital ingredient for tastier dishes, such as the wonderful »Lievito Madre«, an Italian sourdough made with a ripe apple, which then becomes unbelievably aromatic bread all'italiana, pizza bianca, focaccia, or panettone. Meanwhile, we leisurely mould pasta and cover it in heavenly sauces, transform legumes into soulfood, reminisce about things long forgotten, and tell each other stories about eating, cooking, and simple pleasures. With this book, the ordinary becomes exceptional. It satisfies our hunger for earnest food. The longing for carefully prepared meals. For honest work. Patience. Care. Love.

Claudio Del Principe: Writer, storyteller, and successful author of seven cookbooks to date. His blog »Anonyme Köche« is a highly acclaimed gem among German food blogs. He loves to focus purely on essentials – in cooking, writing, and photography – and kindles the passion for cooking and relishing that slumbers in many of us. - The joy and happiness of handmade quality food: kneading, rolling out, and moulding pasta by hand
- Basic recipes for different dough variations, classical pasta types, and matching sauces
- The temptation of handmade pasta. From simple everyday dishes to pompous feasts

After home-made bread and sourdough, handmade pasta is the latest craze of the »craft« food scene. Looking back at old traditions, and glancing over the shoulder of Italian nonnas (who are currently winning the hearts of foodies on Instagram and YouTube), the art of making handcrafted pasta is weaved into modern recipes. Claudio Del Principe has always been passionate about »pasta fatta in casa«, and he is convinced that everyone can make pasta. Expertly entertaining, witty, and well-illustrated, his instructions show us how to create, with utmost care and attention, tempting delicacies using flour, water, and eggs. Be it simple tagliarini or tiny artistic creations, pappardelle, cappellacci, garganelli, agnolotti, or fagottini, cavatelli, trofie, or orecchiette – each of these has its own detailed description accompanied by matching classical add-ons, »ragù« and »sughi«. A book about the joy of good handmade food and a must for anyone who loves pasta.

Pastry, au gratin, or Sunday roast – the beguiling scent from the oven carries a promise of happiness, pleasure and comfort. Following his cooking diary »a casa«, Claudio Del Principe dedicates his latest book to irresistible dishes from the oven. Even more minimalist, but just as sophisticated, with the same love and care, and accompanied by sensual and witty thought about cooking. Once again an ode to time and slowness, celebrating the art of relaxed and expectant cooking. Protagonists: a beef plate roasted for twelve hours, a glazed leg of lamb, caramelized, roasted vegetable au gratin, fish in salt crust, spicy nuts, classics from the Italian cuisine such as parmigiana, lasagne or torta di bietole, and of course numerous pastries, souffles, and desserts.

The Best Picks from the Vegetable Garden

»Orto« is the Italian word for vegetable garden. Without »ortaggi« – i.e. good quality vegetables from the garden or the market – Italians are hopelessly lost. Like true virtuosos, they turn them into bittersweet salads, addictive antipasti, perfect pasta complements, rich soups, or side dishes that can very well stand for themselves. A number of different vegetables and incomparable ways of preparing them make for an incredible variety of flavours. Nowadays we can find extravagant vegetables such as cime di rapa, catalogna, barba di frate, radicchio, castelfranco, or puntarelle even in our local shops. Claudio Del Principe selects the best Italian recipes, explains their origin, traditions, and various ways of preparation, and refines them with his own modern creations and inspiring ideas.

The Ultimate Book on Saffron

Saffron has been used for thousands of years, as medicine and for cosmetics, as colorant and spice. Cleopatra is said to have bathed in saffron water before going on a date. Merchants who traded fake saffron during the Middle Ages were burned alive or buried along with their fake goods. Swiss saffron producers Sandra and Urs Durrer shed light on the subject from all possible angles: looking at the origin of the plant, its botanical classification, growing regions, and trade, but also its use for dyeing, in medicine, cosmetics, and gastronomy. Featuring portraits of saffron producers from Switzerland, Germany, Austria, and South Tyrol, as well as planting instructions for amateur gardeners. In the recipe section five different top-notch chefs present their favourite saffron recipes such as saffron ravioli or tarte tatin with pear and saffron.

Sandra Durrer and Urs Durrer: Produce saffron at their plantations in Surselva and Obwalden. They are farmers and caterers who love nature and healthy, delicious cooking. Their saffron plantation puts great emphasis on sustainable production and the preservation of biodiversity.

Julien Duvernay is one of the most renowned pâtissiers in Switzerland. At Tanja Grandits' restaurant Stucki in Basel he has caused quite a sensation with his extraordinary creations that »baffle everyone« according to the GaultMillau restaurant guide. For the first time ever Duvernay provides detailed and comprehensible instructions on how to prepare and arrange his desserts in order to reproduce them successfully at home. In nine chapters – on the topics of citrus fruits, tea, cereals, caramel, pepper, vegetables, flowers/blossoms, herbs, and oil – the most eccentric combinations turn into sweet seductions. Among the roughly 70 recipes we find colourful lollipops, special preserves, spreads, and cakes. Including a glossary of products and techniques.

Julien Duvernay: Born 1982 in Roanne, France, he learned the trades of pâtissier and chocolatier from scratch in his home country. Since 2012 he is chef of the dessert cuisine at »Stucki« in Basel (19 GaultMillau points, two Michelin stars).

Slow and steady wins the race...

»Can I leave the dough from this recipe to ferment overnight?« is the question Judith Erdin is asked by far the most frequently. No wonder –who would not want fresh, home-made bread for breakfast without having to get up really early to prepare it?

In her third book the trained baker and confectioner presents her favourite recipes for bread and rolls for which the dough can be prepared the evening before. In the morning you merely need to shape it, let it rest, and then bake it. Within no more than one and a half hours you will have a wonderfully aromatic warm bread for breakfast that is easy to digest because of the small amount of yeast and the length of the fermentation.

The theoretical part has a particular focus on fermentation, for instance explaining the influence of yeast and room temperature. The author provides detailed descriptions of frequent mistakes made when baking bread and their causes. With the help of this book, nothing is in our way when trying to bake the perfect bread for breakfast.

- One dough makes three different types of bread or pastries
- With insider tips from a professional baker
- Quality that tastes like fresh from the bakery – even with a household oven

Baking bread at home that tastes like fresh from the bakery? Easily done, and without additives or expensive professional equipment. Former baker and confectioner Judith Erdin shares her favourite recipes for bread and pastries in a very detailed yet uncomplicated way. Popular classics such as weggli (milk rolls), lye rolls, or baguette, followed by wholemeal bread, spelt breakfast rolls, or nut bread. With little effort she creates many variations fresh from the oven. Thanks to the concept of »1 dough – 3 recipes« 14 basic types of dough make for 42 different breads and pastries. Who would have thought that the dough used for Ticino bread can be used to bake poppy rolls or grissini? In addition, the book contains lots of information and valuable tricks on how to bake bread, allowing us to replicate the quality of bakery-manufactured bread in a standard household oven, so even absolute beginners will achieve perfect baking results. Homemade bread that genuinely tastes like bread from the bakery – or even a bit better.

Judith Erdin: Trained baker and confectioner, and also a trained polygrapher. She develops new, easy to prepare recipes for her clients as well as for her own recipe blog »streusel.ch«, and shares her knowledge in culinary workshops.

Rolls, strudel, croissants, doughnuts – bake like an expert!

How do confectioners and bakers do it? Their pastries look perfect and taste delicious at the same time. What makes their dough so fluffy, their cream fillings so tender, and their caramel so savoury? In her second book, Judith Erdin unveils these secrets and many more. The trained baker and confectioner shows us from scratch how to prepare classical confectionery recipes using natural ingredients. Each recipe has two parts, the traditional version and a vegan one which is just as gorgeous and tasty. These recipes allow vegans to finally enjoy classical cakes and pastries they were missing out on. Whenever possible, ingredients are chosen locally and are easy to come by. In a dedicated section on theory the expert offers tips for the selection of ingredients and baking utensils, techniques for rolling out dough, and other knowhow. With the help of her step-by-step guidelines, you can create the perfect apple strudel, chocolate doughnuts, and vanilla bismarcks fresh from the oven.

- The great book on cooking on the open fire
- 100 traditional and modern dishes, all tried and tested cooking methods at the fire
- The comprehensive book on cooking on the open fire, including numerous enchanting photos

Cooking by the fire outside at the heart of nature has its very own peculiar fascination and sensuality, it is connected with adventure and the experience of going back to the roots of things. The book draws from the rich repertoire of traditional cooking methods and recipes that have endured partly until this day. Noble spit cake on the log, a large loaf of bread baked above the blaze, salmon on a snow shoe grill, tender and juicy meat cooked in a burrow, dough pockets in wicker mesh. 100 recipes with numerous variations – ranging from classics to modern creations, from traditional tastes of Stone Age dishes to refined feasts for gourmets, all of them are simple and can be cooked without many tools on the open fire. The author has long years of experience with cooking by the open fire and her descriptions of the recipes are easy to understand and cook for both beginners and cooking fans. An inspiring book that renders its reader adventuresome. With exact instructions, all necessary information on making a fire, many wild plant suggestions and, as a round-off, camp fire stories to read or retell.

Susanne Fischer-Rizzi: Born 1952, naturopath, graduate of the renowned Josef Angerer School, and trained by various specialists of naturopathy in Europe and Asia, pioneer of aroma therapy and author of 13 books to date translated into various languages. - Vast and compact knowledge on 1000 edible wild plants
- Swift orientation thanks to graphic representation, charts and icons
- A precious pocket-size reference book with 300 plants on colour photos

Today edible wild plants have been rediscovered and are immensely trendy. After his best-selling work »Edible wild plants« containing the 200 most important edible plant types and the reference work »Encyclopedia of edible wild plants«, Steffen Guido Fleischhauer now presents a reasonably-priced pocket encyclopedia. The book offers a concise and handy presentation of all relevant information on the 1000 most important edible wild plants of Central Europe. It comprises information on the traditional ways the different plant parts can be used, on times for collecting as well as general use of edible wild plants. Brief explanatory texts, use of icons as well as colour and graphic highlighting allow for quick orientation and easy consultation. The plants are in alphabetic order according to the most common German plant names, the index lists all botanical names and known name synonyms with corresponding page numbers. The 300 most prominent edible types are additionally captured on excellent colour photos.

Steffen Guido Fleischhauer: Graduate engineer in landscape architecture, College of Higher Education Weihenstephan. Lectures at universities and colleges in Germany, Austria, and Switzerland. Publisher of the »Wild Plant Magazine«.

- The latest edition of the classic: now even more comprehensive and practical to use
- New feature: identification key based on leaf shape. New chapter: rare and endangered edible plants
- Newly added topic: poisonous plants, confusable edible plants and differentiating features

Wild plants secured the survival of mankind over thousands of years. These days they experience an exceptional renaissance and are widely used among top chefs due to their various and intense flavours. Rich in vitamins, mineral and micronutrients they offer valuable help in protecting health and are therefore significantly superior to cultivated vegetables. The book describes more than 2000 plant types of Central Europe that have all been used as food at some point in time. The authors evaluate all the studies, research and experience currently available. Classified based on their leaf shape, there are descriptions of each plant type including occurrence, blooming period and nutritional use along with detailed guidelines for preparation. Each plant portrait lists and explains currently known content substances and healing effects, possible dangerous confusion with poisonous plants as well as effects of toxic content elements. Including about 650 excellent colour photos and 450 plant drawings to facilitate identification.

Steffen Guido Fleischhauer: Graduate engineer for landscape planning. Lectures at the Universities of Zurich, Weihenstephan and St. Gallen on edible wild plants. Over many years, he has gathered experience all over Central Europe on edible wild plants. He offers guided hiking tours, nature adventure trips, lectures and seminars on edible wild plants.

Jürgen Guthmann: Graduate engineer for physical chemistry. Laboratory supervisor for food chemistry at the University of Applied Sciences Weihenstephan. Many years of experience with nutrition and health issues, specialized on healing plants and fungi.

Roland Spiegelberger: Landscape gardener and graduate engineer for landscape architecture and environmental planning. Since 1986 focus on domestic wild plants, conveying botanical knowledge to interested wild plant gardeners and collectors.

- How to recognize and use 200 species
- Edible wild plants in words, drawing and image: Botany, usage and further information
- Overview table on the best collecting times for the presented edible wild plants

Collecting and relishing edible wild plants is a sheer wonder of nature, inspiring more and more people these days. Wild plants are rich in vital substances and offer a variety of special aromas, also they are easy to find and readily available for just anyone. Apart from basic botanical data (botanical name, family, life form, height of growth, blooming season, blossom colour) this practical identification guide focuses on the plants' most important features of recognition that are reproduced by detailed illustrations and excellent colour photos. Poisonous plants liable to cause confusion are illustrated as well. For each plant, there is a detailed description when to harvest their different parts. Next to suggestions on how to prepare the wild plants for cooking purposes there is always a description of their basic taste as well as information on their most important content substances and health effects. In order to allow orientation throughout the whole vegetation period the edible wild plants are sorted according to leaf shape – for the first time in a German publication. The book is rounded off by a table of harvesting times and an index of name synonyms. The practical pocket size renders the book an ideal companion for outdoor walks to the edible wild plants.

Steffen Guido Fleischhauer: Graduate engineer for landscape planning and landscape architecture, College of Higher Education Weihenstephan. Concentrated for long years on edible wild plants. Gathered experience all over Central Europe in alimentation with plants from wild nature. Today offers guided walking tours, nature adventure trips, lectures and seminars on the topic of edible wild plants.

Jürgen Guthmann: Graduate engineer for technical chemistry. Worked for many years in the area of food chemistry, nutrition and health issues. Editor of a guide on vital fungi.

Roland Spiegelberger: Landscaper and graduate engineer for landscape architecture and environmental planning, Höxter Polytechnic. Since 1986 he has studied indigenous wild plants and recently also communicates botanical knowledge to interested wild plant gardeners and collectors.

- The culinary world of Israel: a symphony of smells, tastes and cultures
- Recipes inspiring all senses and easy to prepare
- Tom Franz: the face of modern Germany in Israel

For Tom Franz cooking has to do with joy, with the love of life itself. To him every meal is »food for the soul«. In a country where 65% of the area consists of desert and the Dead Sea, he has discovered the Garden of Eden rich in legendary vegetables and fruits. A land of plenty. In this book Tom Franz allows us to catch a glimpse of Israel's cuisine nourished by innumerable memories of immigrated Jews from across the globe. Israel is a culinary melting pot shaped by immigrants from all over Europe, Russia and the USA, as well as the Far and Middle East. Mediterranean ingredients, traditional Jewish cuisine, Arabic spices, modern recipes – an incredible diversity of various elements creates utmost exciting combinations. Israel is state-of-the-art when it comes to culinary delights. Characterised by innovation and openness to go beyond the conventional and adopt foreign influences. An extraordinary, magnificent book! Let us build bridges!

Tom Franz: Rhinelander, trained lawyer. Worked as an international lawyer until his emigration to Israel in 2004 where he converted to Judaism and turned his passion for cooking into a career. Today he lives in Tel Aviv with his wife and three children.

»Tom takes us back to our actual cuisine, only with a modern touch. Tom represents something that is missing from the Mediterranean mentality of Israelis: professionalism, exact and accurate work.« – Michal Anski, jury member on Masterchef

»A native German familiarises Israelis with their own traditions. He stands for a new type of Judaism – trendy, modern, appealing.« – Dana Franz

»This is about more than just cooking. Tom is an Israeli. But he is also a face of today's Germany.« – Andreas Michaelis, German Ambassador to Israel

»I was never a passionate lawyer, but I cook with passion.« – Tom Franz

- Sustainability is enrichment, not deprivation
- By the founder of the biggest social media account for sustainability in Switzerland
- With data on the ecological footprint of meals

Changing our eating habits is an emotional affair. We could bring about immense positive change just with the way we eat – benefitting both our own health and the planet. Anina Gepp shows us how simple, tasty, and above all cheap sustainable cuisine can be. Long forgotten vegetables, newly interpreted classical dishes, and even grandma's favourite recipes find their way back on our plates. Her cooking is regional, seasonal, and purely plant-based, but at the same time abundant. Thanks to information on the ecological footprint of the dishes it becomes clear at first glance that healthy and sustainable cooking is not only good for us but also for the environment. With lots of valuable input on various topics related to cooking: How to save on wrapping? What to prefer: milk yoghurt in a jar or soy yoghurt in a plastic cup? And is an organic tomato from Italy better from an environmental perspective than a domestic one from the greenhouse that was grown in a conventional way but sold without wrapping?

Anina Gepp: Food stylist, blogger, and freelance journalist. She runs »Aniahimsa«, currently the biggest Swiss social media account on sustainability. With great enthusiasm she covers topics such as health, environmental protection, and plant based nutrition.

- A camper van cookbook inviting us to linger, browse, and dream

Vegan food from the van kitchen: vantastic! Minimalistic cooking for maximum taste

Vegan cooking doesn't need to be complicated. On the contrary, the recipes in this cookbook are so simple they can be easily prepared on two hotplates in a camper van. If you long for more variety and freshness in your diet at home or on the road but are reluctant to spend hours in the kitchen, this is the perfect book for you. The recipes are ideal both for those eager to prepare a quick yet delicious weekday dinner, as well as those willing to invest a little more time and research to create interesting new food combinations. During her travels in the camper van the author visits farmer's markets, health food stores, and packaging-free shops, while drawing inspiration from the people she encounters. These very personal stories add a special zest to the various dishes. Breath-taking photographs of endless landscapes and the most beautiful camping sites invite us to slow down. Experience the van life feeling in your own home!

Anina Gepp: Author of »Eat green!«. Food stylist, blogger, and freelance journalist. She runs Switzerland's biggest social media account on sustainability, named »Aniahimsa« (100,000 followers on Instagram).

»The big challenge of the camper van kitchen is to achieve as much taste, finesse, and variety in your cooking as if you were at home, while being confined to a very small space. Instead of four hotplates I only have two. Sounds complicated, but it can actually be rewarding: the space constraints force me to figure out how to simplify, change, or even reinvent a particular recipe.«

- An inspiring story and cookbook – food for body, spirit, and soul
- A journey through world literature in 50 recipes and culinary anecdotes

Journalist and blogger Nicole Giger is passionate about reading and eating. Good food nourishes the body, good books nourish the spirit. It is therefore hardly surprising that cooking, eating, and savouring play an important role in literature and in the life of many writers. Nicole Giger interweaves her own recipe creations with literature, calls on a variety of authors from all over the world, and tells us some personal culinary anecdotes from her own life. The recipes are uncomplicated, colourful, and healthy, the literary pieces multifaceted and inspiring. After reading them you will not only know what to cook for dinner tomorrow, but also the matching story to tell at the table. Stories, vegetables, and pleasure – for those who like all of these, this is just the right book. An inspiring story and cookbook.

Nicole Giger: German philology graduate. Since 2014 she has been writing her blog »Mags Frisch«, combining her passion for eating and literature. After several years with SRF she is now a freelance journalist, food stylist, columnist, and photographer.

- A modern approach to nature's cuisine – in enchanting pictures
- 90 new, simple, and astonishing recipes
- A sensual combination of nature experience and food culture

Eat the gifts of nature. This ancient principle was the leitmotif of the authors. Outdoors amidst nature they opened all their senses to anything that grows, smells, and blooms. And just like in their first volume, »Dahlia Crisps & Barberry Rice«, they harvested, collected, and then experimented in their kitchen. The result: 90 new, delicious recipes that are easy to prepare and will certainly surprise and delight all your guests. Moreover the authors share interesting knowledge and poetic thoughts on 30 plant types.

This book is an inspiration inviting us to seek a unique connection with nature. When we start collecting, cooking, and even prior to that, when looking at the charming photos, we cannot help ourselves but to marvel at the treasures of nature.

The cornucopia of nature. Paying tribute to nature and to our senses

Eating whatever nature provides for us. This ancient principle was the starting point and leitmotif of the authors. They ventured outside into nature and opened all their senses to anything that grows, scents and blooms. They gathered and harvested blossoms, herbs, roots, resin, then started their sophisticated kitchen experiment. The result: 90 delicious recipes, easy to cook at home and guaranteed successes with astonished guests, starting from daisy crackers all the way to primrose spring rolls and sage nut tart. For some of the plants the authors have added interesting and poetic portraits. This book is an inspiration that invites us to reconnect with nature in a wonderfully unique way. Once we start to gather and cook, and even before that, when looking at the lovely photos in this book, we will be amazed by the wonders of nature.

»We discovered dead-nettles, violets, and hawthorn blossoms where we had suspected to find nothing but green thickets. • Very simple recipes, can be easily prepared by anyone

Holder of GaultMillau's Chef of the Year Award 2006 with a remarkable 16 points, Tanja Grandits ranks among the rising stars of Swiss cuisine. Having been raised on Swabian rustic food, today, at the restaurant Thurtal in Eschikofen, ten kilometres east of Frauenfeld, she consciously cultivates a fresh, merry »world cuisine« featuring a variety of spices and aromas, combining - without any artificiality - subtle, professional application of these with local produce. Tanja Grandits has selected 15 of her favourite aromas for this cook book - herbs such as mint and basil, but also spices such as cinnamon and vanilla as well as ingredients such as ginger, limes, wasabi or honey. For each of these she recalls experiences made or memories associated with them, and then shares five recipes each. One of them is always a basic for storage and serves as point of reference for further recipes, for instance chilli syrup, lemongrass marinade or rose salt. All the recipes - be it starters or soups, Vegetarian food, fish and meat dishes or even desserts - are very simple and can be easily prepared by anyone.

- 80 artful and easy recipes in a glass
- Gentle cooking and dramatic serving in a glass
- The new trend in cuisine

This book presents with the help of 80 recipes - ranging from amuse-bouches and apéritifs, soups and starters to main courses and desserts – the appealing preparation and presentation of dishes in a glass. Served in a glass, the different layers produce astounding effects and the dishes hence produce a particular taste sensation when the layers get mixed while eating. Recipes in a glass are easy to prepare, simple to arrange and look utterly artful. The book not only shows how to dramatically present dishes in a glass, but in more than half of the recipes the food is marinated, cooked, stewed or roasted directly in the glass. Glass is suited perfectly for slow cooking of meat and fish at low temperature in a vacuum (Sous-Vide method) which has many advantages: The food remains succulent, vitamins and mineral material are preserved and preparation is utmost simple. Baking and roasting in a glass is just as subtle and makes a pleasant change in your cuisine.

- Herbs, their characteristics, and various ways to use them in the kitchen
- 140 simple recipes with elegant photos by Michael Wissing

Following the success of her opulent work »Spices«, Tanja Grandits is now publishing her latest book on »Herbs«. In this book, the distinguished expert of aroma cuisine presents 140 new recipes that can be easily prepared by anyone. She proves that herbs can be much more than mere decoration. In her recipes they play the lead role – from roast potato rocket salad, to zander marinated in lemon verbena, to thyme sablés. On top of that, she presents lots of useful information about the characteristics and possible uses of 40 different herbs, some of them well-known, some of them yet to be discovered: from sweet basil to anise-like sweet fennel, from the pleasantly bitter watercress to sorrel and its citrus-like flavour.

- 100 everyday recipes, plus numerous tips and surprising techniques

Tanja Grandits is the highest ranking female chef in Switzerland, her restaurant Stucki in Basel was awarded 2 Michelin stars and 18 GaultMillau points. Her avant-garde cuisine is one of a kind. But the native Swabian is not only a creator of extraordinary gourmet menus. She is also a mother and a great hostess in her colourful apartment above the restaurant. There she prepares granola bars for her daughter Emma as a take along snack or lavish meals for her employees. This other side of the star chef is highlighted in this book. It presents a cuisine that is compatible with family and everyday life, simple, but always offering characteristic flavours and surprising combinations. By which she proves that the biggest happiness comes from the meals we cook with joy.

Tanja Grandits' Vegetarian Cuisine for Daily Use!

Vegetarian cooking chimes with the zeitgeist, while it is also part of Tanja Grandits' daily routine. At home, the star chef from Basel and her daughter almost exclusively eat dishes without meat or fish but with lots of vegetables, crops, and legumes. In this book she presents the basics of her vegetarian cuisine: hot and cold meals to start the day, snacks and sandwiches suitable to take along, soups, rice, and pasta dishes, cheese and milk products, baked dishes and desserts. Unexpected surprises such as home-made goat cheese using milk from the region render this book a genuine treasure. A kitchen with heart and soul, vegetables, and tasty delights for every day.

- Native trees for medicine chest and kitchen
- 80 healing recipes based on tree medicine, 180 cooking recipes from spicy to sweet
- Portraits of 28 tree types complete with high quality photos

Trees have always been faithful companions of mankind. They serve not only as building material and fuel, but also as source of food and beneficial medicine. In the past it was quite common to use wild tree ingredients to prepare food and various types of medicines. And even today they can contribute in many ways to our health, our well-being, and also to our kitchen. Tree and alternative medicine specialist Karin Greiner unveils the treasures that domestic tree types have to offer, from apple to stone-pine. Recipes cover a wide range from traditional and simple to sophisticated and innovative, from acorn coffee and hawthorn bread, medlar liqueur, and rowan balsamic to clove cherry cakes and poplar frittelle. On top of that, the book offers a number of reliable ancient recipes for tree medicine, such as lime blossom tea, larch resin ointment, or whitethorn tincture, all of which make use of the healing powers found in trees.

Karin Greiner: Certified biologist, lecturer of herb pedagogy, folk medicine, and various nature topics. Longtime plant expert for Bayerischer Rundfunk (Bavarian Broadcasting) and author of numerous books on the topics of nature and gardening. Enthusiastic cook.

What is bound to happen when Herbert Grönemeyer and his producer Alex Silva start working on new songs in a secluded house somewhere in lovely San Gemini, while Lorena Autuori cooks her favourite dishes from Umbria and Southern Italy for them? The birth of a special kind of book. One that makes people happy, just like music and good food, for it nurtures the soul, heart, and belly. With Lorena Autuori's dishes the successful musician gathers strength for long studio sessions, draws inspiration in the short breaks between recordings, and reflects on the day that passed - aperitivo in hand. The book not only presents the favourite recipes of Herbert Grönemeyer and Alex Silva from the fabulous cuisine of Lorena Autuori, but it also allows a unique insight into the creation of an album and shows the importance of good food for creative processes.

Lorena Autuori: Raised in Salerno, disciple of Gualtiero Marchesi, Italy's first Michelin star chef. Today she owns a restaurant in Umbria and offers cooking classes to a worldwide audience.

Herbert Grönemeyer: The musician and actor has released 19 records to date. With more than 18 million sold copies he is one of the most successful contemporary musicians in Germany. He starts his new tour in spring 2023, with concerts in Germany, Austria, and Switzerland.

Alex Silva: The music producer started his career in London in 1995 where he worked with many international stars such as Mick Jagger, Paul McCartney, and the Manic Street Preachers. Since the album »Bleibt alles anders« from 1998, Alex Silva has been cooperating closely with Herbert Grönemeyer and was awarded the Echo prize for »Best Producer« in 2003.

»Cooking makes me feel as good as singing. Cooking is like meditation. It creates calmness. It is like taking some down time.« Herbert Grönemeyer

How to use the delicious power of food

The greatest health threats of our time are chronic diseases, future pandemics, and climate change. All three are significantly influenced by what we eat. With each meal we have the power to invest in our own health and that of the planet. Renowned vegan chef Surdham Göb together with nutritionist Cirus Henn smartly integrated medical research results into a cookbook with wholefood plant recipes. Their motto: modern, sustainable, and future oriented cooking, yet uncomplicated and extremely savoury. Ingredients are easy to get, colourful and diverse. The images of each dish make it very clear: the book is by no means about abstinence and dieting, but rather about relishing the delicious powers of food. Shape the future of our world with your cooking. With a preface by Prof. Dr. Claus Leitzmann.

Surdham Göb: Vegan chef and successful cookbook author, founder of Surdham's Kitchen, ran various restaurants in Munich. Supporting member and cook of the association »Medicine and Humanity e.V.« and lecturer at the Bavarian Medical Association, certified courses at the Physicians Association for Nutrition e.V. (PAN).

Cirus Henn: Nutritionist, co-founder of the Physicians Association for Nutrition e.V. (PAN), medical student. Focus on nutrition as a means of improving wellbeing and performance as well as for prevention and therapy for illnesses. Seminars and lectures on the topic of nutrition in medicine.

- Fermenting made easy: various tips and tricks for beginners and experts
- Smart recipes for everyday cooking with regional ingredients
- Featuring a useful seasonal calendar

Fermenting vegetables and fruit has a longstanding tradition and is one of the most ancient, natural, and gentle ways of preserving food. Sibylle Hunger, the number one Bavarian »fermentista«, presents a healthy and sustainable diet with fermented food items.

Her introduction to basic concepts of the craft and simple step-by-step instructions are followed by a variety of delicious fermentation recipes. In addition, the author shares uncomplicated recipes for daily use – salads, wraps, souffles, or desserts – in which the fermented food items are the main attraction. Delicious taste is just as essential as the seasonal and regional character of the chosen ingredients: next to well-known fruits and vegetables she rediscovers almost forgotten types such as Jerusalem artichoke, savoy cabbage, or kale. A book that teaches a historical craft and enables the reader to eat much more consciously throughout the year.

Sibylle Hunger: Passionate fermentista for 30 years, known from public television (Bayerischer Rundfunk). She leads fermentation courses, runs a cooking studio in Stephanskirchen, Germany, and distributes products of her own brand »Manufaktur Gmiashunger«.

- Let your hands help your heart flow into your food
- Cooking with hands and heart. The joy of cooking as handcraft
- 50 simple recipes with vegetables and crops

Kneading dough with your own hands releases energy and makes you happy – and handmade pastry does taste better. Koreans have an expression for this: «son mat», i.e. hand taste. It is the way a meal is prepared, defining its quality: with the help of the kneading, shaping hands, the cook inserts the personal bliss of cooking into the food. Our hands are not just tools, but also a means of perception and sensation. And as such they need to be compensated for the monotonous typing at work and daily routine. 50 recipes dedicated to domestic vegetables and crops present traditional modes of preparation without high-tech kitchen aids and open up a whole new approach to our eating habits. But most of all they are fun, taste delicious, and unite cook and eaters around the table in love. For the way to a person's heart is through their stomach – and to achieve this, love needs to flow through our hands right into our meal, via tasteful ingredients.

- Japanese cuisine, inspired by Zen. Simple and light vegetarian East-West cuisine
- A journey through Japanese food culture
- Domestic vegetables and crops combined with Japanese ingredients and cooking techniques

This cookbook is about the beauty of vegetables and the appreciation of food items that nourish us day by day. The Japanese way of cooking is based on the belief that everything is valuable, and that all things are unique. This thinking is reflected in the character of their dishes. This cookbook combines local vegetables and fruits, rice, and other crops with Japanese ingredients such as miso, soy sauce, sake, the sweet rice wine mirin, or the soup stock dashi. And it shows how to prepare these using Japanese cooking techniques such as tempura, fermentation, or Japanese-style barbecue. The vegetable and grain dishes created with this method build a bridge between East and West. They are simple and light, nurture body and soul, and open up new horizons for cooking and our relationship to food. Accompanied by short paragraphs that shed light on cultural backgrounds and tell entertaining stories from the land of the Rising Sun. A journey exploring the food culture of both Japan and our own home turf.

- Fresh, modern Greek cuisine
- Brand-new surprising recipes
- With charming photos and short paragraphs about food culture

Lazaros knows how to make dishes taste like the sun and seaside. The cuisine of his native country, known mostly for moussaka or souvlaki, has much more to offer than the two classics. And even these are transformed into exciting novelties if prepared by the author. On a culinary journey through Greece he leads the way to many new discoveries: have you heard for instance of Karpouzopita Milou, Milo's watermelon cake?

Lazaros presents recipes from various regions all over Greece: spreads, salads, feta and yogurt dishes to share, classics, hotpots and soups complemented by sweet pastries, honey-based treats and fruit desserts. Always with a fresh, modern twist and easy to cook at home.

Lazaros Kapageoroglou: Chef and patissier who spoiled his guests on Mykonos, Santorini and Crete, later also in France. Since 2012 the Greek gastronome and entrepreneur lives in Zurich where he offers catering as well as cooking classes and events.

»Talking to Laz you can literally feel the sun rising. Even if it is raining like crazy, the energy Laz radiates lightens up everything and everyone around him. His recipes, ingredients, and hugs bring a taste of Greece straight into our home.« – Cathrin Michael, writer and editor for his two cookbooks

- Eat all parts of a vegetable
- 70 vegetarian recipes, reports, and portraits
- The ultimate reference book on edible parts of 50 different vegetables

Why don't we eat carrot tops? Why is the rind of water melons a classical ingredient in the US, while we discard it in Europe? Why are tomato leaves said to be poisonous, yet many chefs use them as ingredient? And: how can we prepare soups, salads, and pesto made of radish leaves? »Leaf to Root« is the new »Nose to Tail« for vegetables. Just as with meat, where tenderloin is not necessarily always the tastiest treat, there is a culinary universe beyond the traditional use of vegetables. This book serves as inspiration for everyday cooks, vegetable gardeners, and professional chefs.

Esther Kern: Journalist and food critic, writes for newspapers and magazines such as Annabelle, Beobachter, Tagesanzeiger, Sonntagszeitung, Münchner Abendzeitung, GQ, and others. In 2002 she launched the online platform waskochen.ch.

Pascal Haag: One of the most prominent ambassadors of vegetarian cuisine in Switzerland. Freelance chef engaged in various projects.

Sylvan Müller: Born 1973, Sylvan Müller has worked as photographer for more than 20 years. His long-term projects such as »Japan – Cooking & Travel Photobook«, »Mom Cooks«, or »The Culinary Legacy of the Alps« are highly acclaimed. A calm and highly minimalist style are the trademark of his captivating photos.

»The thoroughness with which the three authors present the concept of 'everything is edible' is unrivalled to date. This makes 'Leaf to Root' a mandatory addition to the bookshelf of creative cooks aspiring to a higher level – even top chefs interested in vegetables will find precious ideas and taboo-breaking suggestions for how to use supposedly 'poisonous' but actually delicious vegetable parts.« – Peter Wagner, www.kochtext.de, Spiegel Online

»The book will initiate a rethinking process and maybe one or the other restaurant will pick up the ideas. A book that promotes sustainable use of the natural treats surrounding us.« – fachbuchkritik.de

»Leaf to Root is probably the most beautiful and important cookbook published this fall. It is an optical delight offering an abundance of information. It is a source of inspiration for any vegetarian cook open to experimenting and a useful compendium for every gardener. This book should be on every bookshelf.« – NZZ BELLEVUE

«Shortlist World Cookbook Award 2017 in its category: VEGETARIANThere is so much to learn from this book, once finished, the reader will never see vegetables in the same way. In fact, this book is one where you do not finish, but keep coming back.» – Edouard Cointreau, President of the Jury - Gourmand World Cookbook Awards

- Covering tea, juice, as well as fermented drinks and shrubs
- Tips for food and drink pairing

Enjoyment without alcohol!

We all know: tea and cake match perfectly. But what effects does tannin have, and how does it get into non-alcoholic beverages? What do volume and viscosity mean? Why is salt almost always an ingredient, and how can fermented beverages add new, special tastes to your drink? More and more people choose not to drink alcohol for various reasons. In bars or restaurants they are usually referred to the soft drinks menu. Nicole Klauß proves that they are much better ways to cater for these needs. Her latest book is addressed to wine connoisseurs, sommeliers, caterers, and wine merchants, but first and foremost to foodies who like to explore and who expect more from a drink than just to quench their thirst. The author takes us to the wondrous world of non-alcoholic beverages and explains their preparation, taste, and what meals to match them with.

Nicole Klauß: Publicist, food consultant, cookbook reviewer, and drink scout. She gives lectures and conducts tastings as well as workshops.

- Food that prevents risks, heals, and keeps healthy
- The latest findings of nutritional medicine. 70 recipes: colon-friendly and anti-inflammatory
- New discoveries about the eating rhythm

In our world full of myths about nutrition, special diets, and ever new types of highly praised superfoods, it is really easy to lose track. Yet it can be so simple to eat healthily. If you want to take charge of your own health, just get hold of a pot and spoon. This book presents the latest findings from nutritional medicine, wrapped in more than 70 savoury, easy to prepare recipes. Be it a heart-healthy smoothie or a bright green liver-friendly omelette for Sunday brunch, a Mediterranean vegetable fry, power energy balls, or anything else the colon might crave for. Because our health starts in the colon. And the precious bacteria in the colon are best kept alive and kicking with the help of unprocessed plant-based foods, combined with herbs, spices, and high-quality vegetable oils. This formula is not only colon-friendly, it also prevents inflammations, which makes it a tasty investment in our own health.

- How to cook with confidence, simple yet special
- Professional kitchen tricks, the basics for hosting guests, and more than 200 recipes
- Shopping, basic supplies, and product know-how

This kitchen manual will turn anyone into a confident cook and host – from shopping to entertaining guests. Richard Kägi presents sensational new interpretations of popular classics: Caesar Salad, the perfect steak, sugo pomodoro, and rösti – but also surprising combinations such as burrata with orange salad, homemade vanilla essence, smoked tomatoes, and extravagant desserts.

Kägi is not only familiar with a number of tricks from the repertoire of star chefs, but also knows their particular spices, sauces, and marinades that make all the difference. Most important ingredients? Most important kitchen utensils? Help with choosing the matching wine? Rules for successful invitations and the art of being a good host? Kägi knows it all. And in between he tells us interesting stories about his adventures as a food scout – about the never-ending search for the best salumi, a vanilla drama in Madagascar, and sushi bliss in Tokyo.

Richard Kägi: Food scout searching the globe for culinary peculiarities. Being a gifted cook himself, he develops recipes for Globus Delicatessa, the largest retailer for high class products in Switzerland. Kägi writes op-eds for the NZZ on Sunday, organises tavolatas, and offers insights into his exciting life as a food scout via his blog.

»Richard Kägi is a globetrotter of good taste. A tireless explorer of the world of flavours! I have great respect for his work, and I am happy that he chose to share his knowledge with us.« – TANJA GRANDITS

- The world of soups – history and stories
- Traditional and brand-new soup recipes, basic knowhow
- Beautifully illustrated

Cook your own soup!

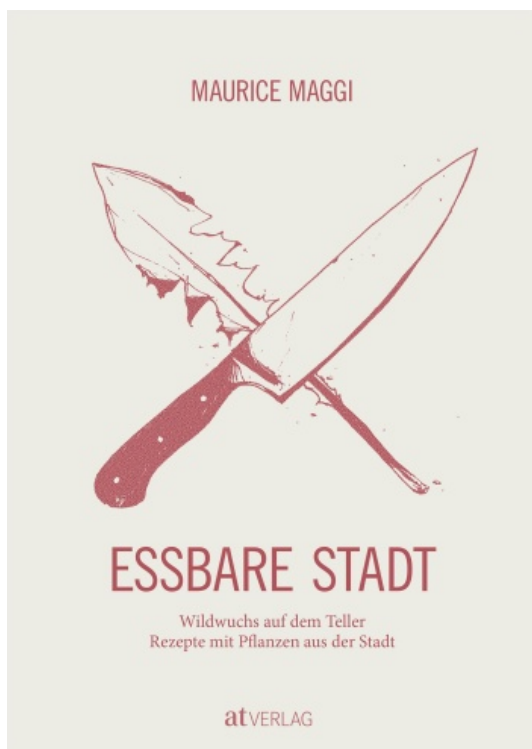

»Cooking soup to me is like painting a picture: time, inspiration, and patience are essential. To take a step back from time to time and to contemplate the picture has immensely positive effects. The same goes for soup. It is very beneficial to put on the lid and let it simmer for a while,« says Maurice Maggi.

Humans and soup share an eventful history. Soup was a constant part of the meal plan in any era, layer of society, and in every phase of the human life cycle. In modern culinary culture soup experiences a true renaissance and earns its well-deserved spot at our table.

Maurice Maggi's book on soup is a declaration of love to an ancient dish: his recipes are simple, delicious, and always carry an unexpected personal, playful note that is both solid and sophisticated. Traditional recipes are synced with the current zeitgeist. Basic recipes, stories, and the illustrations of Mira Gisler render this book an indispensable gem.

Maurice Maggi: is a chef, gardener, and author. His books »Edible City«, »Simple Variety«, and »Mushrooms from the Forest and from the City« published by AT showcase his creative approach to food. His personal credo is substantial and honest gastronomy.

- The first book by the pioneer of guerilla gardenin
- Simple and inventive recipes with wild plants from the city
- Vegetarian cuisine for city hikers

Guerilla gardener and cook Maurice Maggi takes us on a culinary adventure to discover the edible treasures of the city. Cities offer a number of wild plants that are excellent for cooking. This book seduces us to collect these wild delights and indulge in some untamed and sensual cooking. Instead of collecting, the wild plants can just as well be replaced with purchased ingredients.

72 vegetarian recipes open up a forgotten world and show us how much taste, spice, and variety lies literally on our doorstep. They teach us to look at city nature with totally different eyes, and they invite us to experiment and playfully use the often unexpected treasures of nature.

The author places strong emphasis on handling these food sources carefully, to value and make the most out of them. A truly creative cooking experience where taste and flavour of seemingly unimpressive ingredients unfold and develop to perfection.

A book that allows us to see the city through a different lens and that takes fashionable wild plant cuisine and »urban gardening« to an even higher level of creativity.

Maurice Maggi: born and raised in Zurich, author, cook and one of the »pioneers of guerrilla gardening«. He is a trained landscape gardener and has been an active cook for over 20 years. Since 2006 he has been working for »Karls Kühne Gassenschau«. He is a fan of seasonal, regional, and vegetarian cuisine. He moves exclusively in urban areas, looking for anything green he can find. As »guerilla gardener« he has been actively involved in shaping the cityscape of Zurich with wild plants since 1984.

- Simple and quick baby meal recipes
- Practical information on healthy baby food
- The ideal gift for parents to be

Food should not only be saturating, it should also make you happy. This is particularly true for the little ones. And the most important elements for a tasty meal are wisely chosen, fresh ingredients. In this wonderfully illustrated book of ideas the author presents simple and quick recipes that are easy and not at all time-consuming to prepare even for the busiest parents. She focuses especially on questions such as: what type of food is appropriate for which age group, what particularities to watch out for with certain products, when is the right season for one or the other ingredient. Structured along age categories, Nadja Mathis explains several basic dishes that you may freely complement, and that can easily be prepared in larger portions for the freezer. Starting with the very first vegetable mash in the fifth and sixth month, moving on to vegetable, rice, and fish mash between month 6 and 9, all the way to smoothies and first finger food for babies aged 9 to 12 months, the book contains everything you need for the health and well-being of infants.

- A perky wine school for the curious. Profound wine expertise, seasoned with humour and a wink
- Important facts about types, wine regions, and quality, explained in a simple and straightforward way
- All you need to know about wine to join an expert conversation

The world of wine has an air of exclusiveness to it. Vintages, classifications, denominations of origin, vineyard locations, appellations, and sometimes absurd taste descriptions are too much for many wine newbies. Such exaggerated seriousness can easily impair the fun and joy of tasting – says the young and unconventional wine blogger Madelyne Meyer, aka Edwin. She has made it her mission to share knowledge about wine in a totally relaxed way, with a good sense of humour and no constraints. Her funny illustrations help beginners find out more about wine in a cheeky and funny but also simple and honest way. She talks about various wine glasses, the importance of the terroir, about types of vine and flavours, about producing regions, and also about the characteristics of a good wine, covering the most important topics in a detailed and easy to understand way. With this book, anyone can instantly become a wine connoisseur and stand their ground in the wine community.

Madelyne Meyer: Following her bachelor's thesis on international wine trends she worked at vineyards in California and studied Wine Marketing & Management in Bordeaux. Today she runs basic wine courses, writes for her blog »edvin uncorked« and for magazines, and is responsible for marketing and communication in her family's wine business.

A discovery tour through the world of wines!

After Madelyne Meyer's bestselling book »Understanding wine, finally« laid the foundation for a sound wine knowledge, her second book is all about confidently selecting wines – be it from a well-stocked store shelf, or from a detailed wine list. This practical true-to-life guide helps us learn more about our own wine taste, understand labels, and place a correct wine order. It shares plenty of useful hints and tricks for our next visit to the wine store and offers a number of wine hacks for everyday use. The professionalism and expertise of Madelyne Meyer's texts and illustrations are paired with sparkling wit and unique humour. Her second book remains true to her mission: to share wine expertise in a simple, clear, and unfiltered way. Once you read this book, you will be able to choose wines quickly and confidently, allowing you to focus on what really matters: enjoying wine.

Madelyne Meyer: Studied Wine Marketing & Management in Bordeaux and worked at vineyards in California. Today she runs wine courses, writes articles and blog posts, and works in wine trade. Her first book »Understanding wine, finally« has sold over 36,000 copies.

How a star chef cooks at home

Nenad Mlinarevic is one of the most renowned and versatile chefs of Switzerland. But who is Nenad, and what would he cook at home in private or when he has guests?

We learn about all this in his first cookbook, a profoundly personal piece of writing. The recipes, developed in his own home, are tastefully demanding but easy to prepare for anyone. The chapters are in line with the realities of his life: he presents breakfast recipes, as well as snacks for sports activities and to eat on the go. Moreover, he shares the most important basics, selected desserts, as well as vegetarian and gluten-free dishes. Nenad also offers tips on how to use leftovers in a creative way, explains what rules we must observe in the kitchen, and why he enjoys cooking as much as he does.

Nenad Mlinarevic: is one of the most renowned chefs of Switzerland. At present he oversees a number of successful restaurants in Zurich: »Bauernschänke«, »Neue Taverne«, »Neumarkt«, and »Brasserie Süd«. He was chef of the year in 2016 and among others maître de cuisine of »Focus« at Park Hotel Vitznau (2 Michelin stars and 18 GaultMillau points).

A slice of fresh bread, and you forget all your cares. The ingredients are simple, yet it takes great skill to transform them into crisp and tasty bread. »Bread Craft« bows to one of the most ancient professions: it portrays 16 bakers who have found their way into the bakery from very different directions, and who proactively foster tradition and enhance their craft. They were so generous as to reveal the recipes of their trademark breads to the authors of this book. Fruitcake, spelt rolls, saffron bread – very soon the scent of such specialities will fill your home. In order to guarantee success, the book includes baking lessons sharing basic information about crops, equipment, and process steps. It guides us on the fascinating path from soaking, starter, or sourdough all the way to the accomplished loaf, making it very clear that it takes more than just flour, water, and salt: the most important ingredients are dedication and time.

- Including useful product details and supply sources

Tasty Malaysia!

Malaysian cuisine is one of the last unexplored culinary territories of Asia, at least in German-speaking countries. But why is it so special? Thanks to its location, the country has been drawing from various different influences – which in food terms translates to aromas from all over Asia as well as influences from the colonial times, which create brand-new taste combinations.

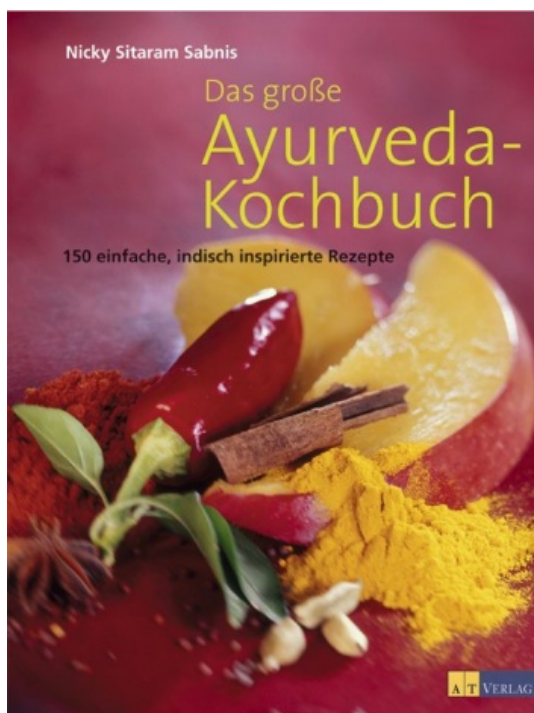

We join the photographer and the author in their travels through breathtaking landscapes, and visit kitchens, chefs, and producers in all parts of the country. The recipes range from traditional dishes to individual interpretations by Christopher Aziz Krebs, some of which contain neither fish nor meat. A comprehensive listing of Malaysian ingredients and where to procure them rounds off this unique book.

Just as thrilling as Malaysian cuisine itself, this cookbook breathes fresh air into your bookshelf.

- Practical advice, tips and tricks for ayurvedic cooking
- Short and concise overview of the basics of ayurvedic nutrition
- Instructions to determine one's individual constitutional type

Ayurveda, the oldest naturopathic system of the world, is a comprehensive theory on how to lead a healthy and proper way of life. In Ayurveda, medicine and nutrition are not kept separate, food is seen as nourishment and remedy at the same time. The ayurvedic philosophy is based on the theory of the five elements, which in turn are associated with the three life forces – the three Doshas Vata, Pitta and Kapha. These three forces or bioenergies control all bodily and spiritual functions and determine a person's individual physical constitution. An imbalance of the Doshas can lead to physical disorders and illnesses as well as energetic disturbances (lethargy, poor concentration, nervousness, etc.). The aim of ayurvedic nutrition is to cure these imbalances and to restore and sustain the necessary balance that is the basis for a strong physical constitution. Depending on constitution, metabolism and way of living, each person requires a different, customized nutrition that brings the body back into balance, ensures a healthy metabolism and provides for the excretion of accumulated waste and toxins.

Nicky Sabnis, an Indian chef working in Germany, presents a cookbook featuring new Ayurveda recipes for everyday use which are quickly prepared and require only few, easily available ingredients. Nicky Sabnis will not allow cheap excuses such as »I don't have time for cooking«, or »Where on earth can I buy all the ingredients for ayurvedic dishes«. With his new book he shows how enthusiastic hobby chefs will always find a solution – even on the go or at work. The recipe mix offered by Nicky Sabnis includes simple basics, soups, pasta, cereals and legumes as well as vegetable dishes, ranging from recipes for workdays, for children and party catering to salad recipes, sandwiches and breakfast ideas, and even further to classical Indian-ayurvedic dishes and drinks such as pakoras, apple chutney, puri, Tandoori murg, Masala rice, raita, lassi and chai. On top of that he provides vivid explanations on basic ayurvedic principles and philosophical backgrounds. »Ayurvedic cooking: quick and uncomplicated« is a practical and inspiring book on ayurvedic cooking for everyone – elegantly captured by the photographs of Sabine Mader and Ulrike Schmid.

- The culinary heritage of three millennia and a variety of cultures
- That's the taste of Jerusalem! Cookbook, restaurant guide, and pleasure reading

Jerusalem cuisine is colourful, dynamic, young, and creative. No matter what dishes visitors to the city decide to try, everything revolves around culinary delight and good-humoured company. The author presents selected restaurants, cafés, and bars, shares her recipes, tells us stories of how they came about and provides portraits of relevant chefs. Thanks to these short and fascinating stories the book is also a wonderful reader.

Tel Aviv may have been Israel's culinary hotspot until recently, but Jerusalem has become the toughest competitor of the white city on the seaside. No other place will impress us the way Jerusalem does when it comes to showcasing Israel's creative and diversified cuisine, as the city has always been a melting pot of various cultures. People from all over the world get together here: Israelis, Palestinians, Arameans, Moroccans, Ethiopians, Yemenites, people from Eastern Europe. The recipes of the Arabic-Levantine and classical European-Jewish cuisine are just as diverse as the backgrounds of the city's inhabitants.

Vanessa Schlesier: Works as investigative journalist in Berlin and travels to the Middle East as often as possible. She used to live in Israel for one and a half years.

- Recipes for health, balance and inner harmony
- A meal plan in tune with the five Chinese seasons
- Cleanse, relieve, and prevent – Recipes and health tips

Following the immense success of her book »Energy Soups«, Karola Bettina Schneider now presents a comprehensive cookbook for the five Chinese seasons. To eat in line with the seasons is crucial for health, vitality, well-being, and a strong immune system according to Chinese traditional medicine. The transition periods between seasons are particularly important in this context, the doji time of four times eighteen days is considered the fifth season. Special cures composed of healing teas and simple dishes have a cleansing, relieving, and preventive effect, plus they energize, strengthen the immune system, and facilitate the transition from one period to the next. The recipes for the four main seasons are just as carefully selected and well adjusted to the requirements of each. 140 simple, light, yet strengthening recipes for an energetic, healthy year. With abundant practical tips and recommendations to enhance your health, balance, and inner harmony.

Karola Bettina Schneider: Lecturer, author, and naturopath running her own practice on Chinese medicine with focus on nutrition, acupuncture, and herbal therapy. She offers seminars on the topics of nutrition, conscious living, and meditation.

- Quick and easy cooking, with many favourite recipes for children
- Featuring kitchen experiments, colourful illustrations, creative ideas, and activity pages

Following the success of the first book »Let's cook, kids!«, the two funny illustrated characters Piet and Marie take children by the hand once again to give them cooking tips and to invite them to experiment and try new things in the kitchen. The book features roughly 70 recipes, all sharing the same motto: they are quick, easy, and uncomplicated. From fresh ideas for the lunch box, to the most popular children's classics like Nutella, fries & Co., to the best quickly and spontaneously prepared meals. All this is accompanied by a host of experiments for the kitchen that help children uncover the secrets of cooking in a playful way. The unique mix of meticulous illustrations, funny photos, creative ideas, as well as tips and suggestions for crafting and other activities stirs the joy of discovery and awakens children's interest for cooking and baking.

Root vegetables: treasures from the earth

Be it in a flowerpot on the patio, in the family garden, or on the field: exotic root vegetables now also thrive in our latitudes thanks to warmer temperatures. The authors planted sweet potatoes, Jerusalem artichokes, yacon, crosne, oca, and taro in different locations. In this book they explain the nuts and bolts of cultivation, harvesting, reproduction, and storage. A number of practical tips make it easy to successfully grow them, both for amateur and for professional gardeners who are curious to discover new plant cultures. The recipe part offers creative ideas on how to prepare them. Jerusalem artichoke cream soup, tagliatelle with crosne, crispy yacon cookies – delicious root vegetables revive the autumn and winter meal plan. Next to the valuable substances they contain, they have several beneficial effects on our health. Things that have been long-known in the folk medicine of their countries of origin are now unveiled to us with the help of this book.

Claudia Steinschneider: Deputy division manager of the laboratory for special cultures in Wies, responsible for cultivation and experiment design in the areas of biological healing and spice plants, biological and conventional vegetables grown in the open air and in shielded areas, as well as ornamental plants. She delivers lectures and publishes in professional magazines.

- The latest food trend from Italy
- Fluffy, light, and crispy – the dough makes all the difference
- With salty or sweet toppings: creativity without limits

All roads lead to Rome – this one goes straight through the stomach!

Pinsa looks very much like her sister, pizza, but you will discover her unique character at first bite: it is the dough that makes all the difference. The savoury pastry was invented by a baker just outside Rome, is made with sour dough and a mixture of different types of flour, and needs to rest between 24 to 72 hours. True slow food. Daniela Taglialegne and Sven Oliver Neitzel show us how to convert an ordinary kitchen into a pinsa workshop. Toppings are added to the crispy, fluffy dough before or after baking. Few or many, classical or eccentric, salty or sweet ingredients – just as the fancy takes you. The book presents the classical dough and several of its variations, as well as a wide range of toppings. Portraits of signature ingredients and ambient snapshots from pinserias all around Rome set an authentic tone. Healthy, uncomplicated delight from Italy's flavourful kitchen – behold its secret recipe.

- Getting acquainted with wild herbs and healing plants, Playful knowledge transfer
- Additional information for teachers and instructors

The book presents twelve plant portraits spreading over the four seasons. Children get to know wild garlic, goutweed, dandelion, stinging nettle, daisy, ribwort, rose hip, elder, marigold, hazelnut, spruce and coltsfoot in a playful way while collecting, preparing and cooking them at the open fire. Alongside simple everyday recipes that kids love, the book also offers many suggestions on how to preserve wild herbs. It presents the traditional use of these herbs for seasonal celebrations such as Easter, summer solstice, Saint Nicholas and Christmas. A separate section provides details on particular botanical, naturopathic and also mythological characteristics of each plant. Useful hints on possible confusion with other plants and a collectors' guide allow for broader insights on the quality of the portrayed plants. The book is rounded off with songs, stories, fairy tales and handicraft instructions.

Violette Tanner: Born 1965, trained healing plant specialist, ecopedagogue, author and mother of three. Over the past 20 years she has focused specifically on domestic healing plants in folk medicine and wild herbs for kitchen use. She passes on her knowledge on domestic herb treasures in courses, herb walks, ecopedagogy seminars, lectures, newspaper op-eds and radio shows.

- The first cookbook on Lithuanian cuisine
- Classic and modern dishes paired with personal variations
- A touching tribute to her mother's homeland

Experience the variety of Lithuanian cuisine

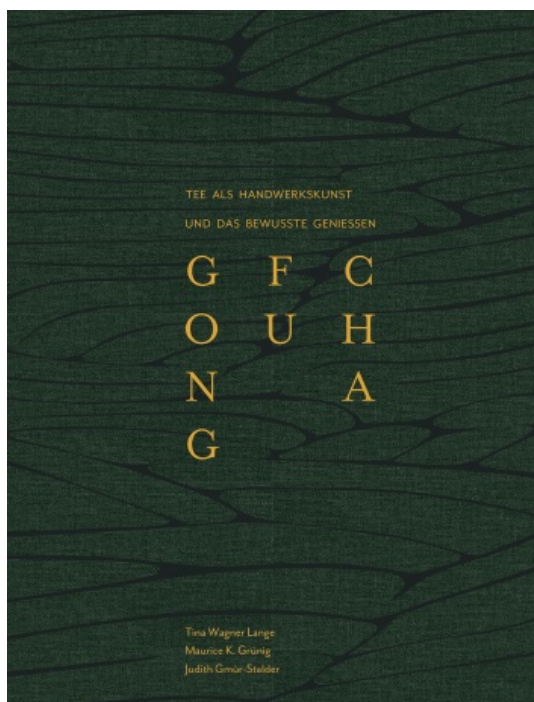

Vilnius is a history-laden city with an astonishingly broad variety in culinary delights. We accompany Denise Snieguole Wachter to the hometown of her mother. To the city where she used to spend her summers.

The author has captured her most cherished memories of that time in this book. With dishes and stories about people who made Vilnius cuisine what it is today. With markets that mirror both the past and the present. In the youthful gastronomy scene of Vilnius, we meet caterers who combine national pride and an ambition for top quality, who love the recipes of their home and yet strive to refine them with a modern note.

The cookbook offers typical dishes such as the deep-fried garlic bread »Kepta duona« with Lithuanian aioli or the pink soup »Saltibarsciai«, but also personal creations such as trout carpaccio or the Vilnius burger. And we also get our fair share of savoury desserts, such as the popular Napoleon cake. This book is an inspiring trip to the culinary highlights of Lithuania's capital city.

Denise Snieguole Wachter: is the culinary expert of STERN magazine. She is half Lithuanian and even as a child preferred cookbooks to novels. She is fascinated by how dishes can tell elaborate stories.

- A young maître de cuisine of a new generation
- High end cooking with unusual ingredients from the Alps
- More than 40 recipes, produce portraits, stories, and technical details

Sven Wassmer grew up in the Swiss lowlands but found his culinary home in the Alps. He celebrates the highest level of modern Alpine cooking at the restaurant »Memories« in Bad Ragaz. Char from Val Lumnezia, asparagus from Reichenau, or carrots from Domleschg – Sven Wassmer preferably works with ingredients from the Alpine region. His culinary art focuses on essentials, but with a broad horizon: he masterfully integrates ideas from the Far East or Scandinavia into his various dishes. This book presents Sven Wassmer's culinary art, his philosophy, and creative approach. It shows us what the word home means to him and focuses on the specialties of the Alps – from fir cone to mountain potato, from wagyu beef to capricorn. More than 40 recipes, rounded off by personal stories and technical specifications of various useful techniques that explain, among others, how to grow sourdough or how fermentation works.

Sven Wassmer: One of the most renowned chefs of a new generation. He earned 18 Gault-Millau points and 3 Michelin stars as maître de cuisine. Before Bad Ragaz Wassmer worked at top restaurants in London, Vitznau, and Zurich.

Soul Food for Every Day

There are recipes that accompany you throughout life and make you happy, even if you have cooked them a hundred times. Usually, they are incredibly simple and uncomplicated, in line with the motto »less is more«. The author's family used to cook many of these dishes in the exact same or just slightly different way, always with the same outcome: making everyone really happy. Because eating should be more than just satisfying a need, it should also make the soul rejoice. Apart from that, some recipes in this book were created to give us a break in our hectic everyday lives and to help us take our time to enjoy, even if we have little time at hand for shopping and cooking. Recipes for any given day, recipes for special »green« days, for relishing, baking, and »sweet« days, as well as special recipes for a beautiful summer with picnics on the balcony or in the garden - in this book you will find savoury ideas for any season.

Annemarie Wildeisen: Journalist, cooking instructor, and housewife. She is editor-in-chief of the cooking magazine »Kochen« and runs a private cooking school in Bern. 18 of her books are currently available at AT Verlag. Many of her cookbooks have become bestsellers.

- TV personality Nadja Zimmermann can do the trick: minimal effort for maximum result
- How to create healthy quality dishes even if you can spare little time for cooking
- LouMalou's family cuisine for any occasion. 100 recipes for everyday use that suit super-busy parents

Busy, hard-working, and multitasking parents rarely can afford leisurely spent hours in the kitchen. Nadja Zimmermann, well-known for her former role as radio and television host, publisher of a successful food blog, and herself a super-busy mother of two, offers relief through this book. 100 everyday recipes for situations we all know just too well: you are running late or do not feel like cooking at all, feel the need to urgently strengthen your immune system, or decide to cook more vegetarian food. The kids demand child-friendly dishes, while you are supposed to contribute with something homemade for the odd school event or barbecue with friends. The chapters focus on 10 real life situations of this kind and offer matching, uncomplicated recipes. True to the leitmotif of this book: minimal effort, maximum result. Simple, easy and healthy.

Nadja Zimmermann: Previously a Swiss radio host and TV producer. Author of four cookbooks. She operates the successful food and lifestyle platform LouMalou.ch where she is passionately devoted to the topic of stress-free cooking.

- Vegetarian favourites to cook at home
- 50 easy-to-cook vegetarian recipes - the very best from tibits' menu
- The first cookery book from the successful vegetarian restaurant chain

Natalie Portman and Stella McCartney do it, Marc Forster, Nadine Strittmatter and Richard Gere as well. Eating vegetarian is trendy. And so are we. Cooking without meat is not an act of abstinence, it is just the opposite: it can be a luscious, savoury and genuinely culinary delight, as proved by the success story of the family enterprise »tibits«. In its four Swiss and one London-based restaurants, »tibits« offers the finest delicacies, both uncomplicated and vegetarian. For the first time ever this book presents 50 of the most popular recipes. Simply a must-have for lovers of savoury vegetarian cuisine.

»Vegetarian food on the highest level – from the stunning lentil salad to most delightful desserts.«
– NZZ, Neue Zürcher Zeitung

»I do love my Bratwurst, yet I cannot resist the food at 'tibits'. Creative recipes, easy to cook at home.« – Nik Hartmann, well-known Swiss TV and radio host
